Brew in real life — scripts

Two versions of the same video: Brew speaking (male voice, first person) and a narrator telling you about Brew (female voice).

Scene (what you see)	Brew's voice	Narrator
Opening Title card: ESTATE TEA · Premium tea for your everyday cup.	Estate Tea. Premium tea for your everyday cup.	Estate Tea. Premium tea for your everyday cup.
7:40 PM · On the couch Sam relaxes on the sofa, lamp on, chai steaming. He asks Brew which tea makes the strongest masala chai; Brew answers with how to brew it.	Evening on the couch, and a question about chai? Just text me. I'm Brew, Estate Tea's tea concierge, on WhatsApp.	Evening on the couch, and a question about chai? Just text Brew, Estate Tea's tea concierge, on WhatsApp.
7:05 AM · Kitchen He opens the Estate Tea tin: empty. Phone out: “Out of tea, one 500 g pack, please.” The invoice arrives in the chat; he pays; “Paid ✓”.	Morning, and the tin is empty? Tell me what you need. Your invoice, your payment, all sorted right here in the chat.	Morning, and the tin is empty? Tell Brew what you need. Your invoice, your payment, all sorted right in the chat.
6:30 AM · Morning run Mid-run, one line: “Same as last time, please.” Brew: “Welcome back, Sam! 500 g to your home, as usual. Invoice sent ✓”.	Out on a run? One line is enough. I remember your details, and your usual.	Out on a run? One line is enough. Brew remembers your details, and your usual.
3:15 PM · Your café Behind the counter: “Need 5 kg for the café this week.” Brew confirms the business price and a GST invoice by email.	Running a café or an office? No calls, no chasing. I'll sort your supply, with a proper GST invoice.	Running a café or an office? No calls, no chasing. Brew sorts your supply, with a proper GST invoice.
6:10 PM · Home The delivery partner leaves the parcel and rings the bell. Email and SMS on the lock screen: out for delivery, delivered. Sam opens the door and picks it up.	And then? It's at your door.	And then? It's at your door.
End card Estate Tea · One message away. Chat with Brew +91 97426 68951, the QR code, estatetea.in.	Estate Tea, one message away. Scan the code, and say hi.	Estate Tea, one message away. Scan the code, and say hi to Brew.